

GOOGLE: THE WEB IS TOO SLOW p54

technology review

Published by MIT

BRIEFING

PRIVATE SPACEFLIGHT
p61

SPECIAL ISSUE

The 50 Most Innovative Companies

New Money
Square, from the creator of Twitter, will transform payments.
p40

PLUS Energy
Miracles
p46

Imitating
WikiLeaks
p70

The Authority on the Future of Technology
April 2011
www.technologyreview.com

COVER

A device called a Square attaches to an iPhone and allows merchants to process credit cards. In 2011, mobile payments are expected to total $119 billion worldwide.

Photograph by Toby Burditt

35 TR50

In our second annual list of the world's most innovative technology companies, we highlight businesses that are changing industries and lives.

By BRIAN BERGSTEIN

■ www.technologyreview.com/tr50 See detailed profiles of the companies.

40 The New Money

Square, founded by the creator of Twitter, has built a simple payment network. That innovation could transform commerce in surprising ways.

By JASON PONTIN

■ www.technologyreview.com/square Take a video tour of Square's headquarters.

46 Praying for an Energy Miracle

What will it take to make clean energy sources cheap enough to compete with fossil fuels?

By DAVID ROTMAN

54 The Slow-Motion Internet

Google's growth plans depend in part on whether it can make the entire Web faster.

By ERICA NAONE

10 Letters12 From the Editor

NOTEBOOKS

14 Curbing Carbon

If we are to prevent further damage to our climate, new energy technologies need the support of sound economic policy.

By Robert N. Stavins

14 Users Rule

Novel technologies that create new markets often emerge from pioneering user inventions.

By Eric Von Hippel

15 Web Wins

Web apps can displace other forms of software if browser and Web technology keep improving.

By Håkon Wium Lie

TO MARKET

17-21 Technology Commercialized

Glasses-free 3-D gaming, smart oven, high-definition Wi-Fi, GPS-equipped ski goggles, portable foldable solar panel, and more.

GRAPHITI

22 World of Ideas

Some countries generate more inventions than their economic stature might indicate.

By Brian Bergstein

Q&A

24 Jonathan Rothberg

The genomic entrepreneur says his DNA-sequencing technology will revolutionize medical testing.

By Emily Singer

PHOTO ESSAY

26 British Sea Power

See the construction of one of the world's largest offshore wind farms off the coast of England.

By Kevin Bullis

BRIEFING

61-69 Private Spaceflight

Companies have made impressive technical progress, but are there enough customers?

■ www.technologyreview.com/briefings/space

See Sierra Nevada's commercial rocket under construction.

REVIEWS

70 Transparency and Secrets

WikiLeaks wants to undermine states and corporations by interfering with their ability to "think." It may not survive, but its innovations will be imitated.

By Jason Pontin

73 How to Stop the Snoopers

Getting advertisers to quit tracking you may be harder than you think.

By Simson L. Garfinkel

76 It's Good to Be the Mayor

Foursquare and other location-based social games are compelling when they harness the energy of offline gaming.

By Matt Schwartz

HACK

78 Arduino Uno

How a cheap microcontroller makes it possible to design and build hardware.

By Erica Naone

■ www.technologyreview.com/hack
See how the Arduino works.

DEMO

80 Building Batteries for Electric Cars

A123's new factory exploits automation and advances in nanotechnology.

By Kevin Bullis

FROM THE LABS

84 Information Technology

85 Materials

86 Biomedicine

34 YEARS AGO IN TR

88 Digital Watches and Pet Rocks

We often misjudge the long-term value of an innovation by focusing on the shortcomings of its early versions.

By Kristina Grifantini