

I.D. — March/April 2009

Vol. 56, Number 2 / Inspired by Nature

RISD's Nature Lab proved the perfect setting for our nature invitational. See "Natural Selection," p. 68.
Photo: Jeff Barnett-Winsby

Features

- |                                                                                                                                                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 34 It Was a Dark and Stormy Year...Top designers share strategies for surviving the recession.by Ernest Beck                                                | 48 Into the WildIntrepid designers go to the ends of the earth for an upcoming Cooper-Hewitt show.by Eve M. Kahn | 66 Please Decay Just a Little Bit LongerMIO designs eco-friendlier-than-usual gardening tools for Target.by William Bostwick                  |
| 38 Love in the Time of AgitaObsessing over his favorite themes—community, utopia, and goo—Jerszy Seymour prepares to open a few design shows.by Nick Currie | 54 Knots LandingRichard Hearne stockpiles rare woods for designers and architects.by Barbara Flanagan            | 68 Natural SelectionWe sent three designers to RISD's Nature Lab to find inspiration among the more than 80,000 specimens.by Monica Khemsurov |
| 44 TED at 25A brief history of the conference that's changed the face of invention.by Nicole Dyer                                                           | 60 Bloom TownsUrban farms are taking over America's asphalt jungles.by Alissa Walker                             | 74 Taking ChargePut your feet up and read about the new generation of electric bikes.by Gordon Kanki Knight                                   |